Subject:

HRH QE II Golden Jubilee

Notes:

No idea what this camera is, I don't recognise it all and I can find any details of it on on the web. There are though examples of pictures taken with a Fuji SP-1500 on specialist photographic sites.

Auntie Dorothy was living in assisted accommodation at what is now Peveril Court (I think it may have been called something else at the time). I took Joseph there regularly, I think at least once a month to spend time with his great aunt. As part of the Queen's Golden Jubilee celebrations the home organised a barbeque in the garden. It was beautiful day, my Mum and Dad were there too. Yoyo was only 8 months old but already he loved his Grandad. A good time was had by all.

Fortunately Yoyo was still feeding on his mother's milk, the rest of us tucked into burgers from the barbeque. From about midnight the consequences cut in. Both Rahel and I were as sick as dogs and on contacting the M and P the following day we discovered that everyone had been suffering vomiting and diarrhoea. Apparently while defrosting the burgers had been stored beneath the chicken. A very grim awakening.

The images have been misplaced for over 20 years and I have only run across them while writing routines of better sort and integrate stuff on disk.

People:

Auntie Dorothy, Betty, Neil, Rahel and Joseph.

Dates:

The dates in the original exif data were clearly wrong and at some point, perhaps in 2019 I reset them. The event certainly took place on the Bank Holiday Monday 3rd June 2002.
