Subject:

Mum and Dad.

Notes:

My dad the year before he died of prostate cancer. Love the beard that he grew briefly but dropped because he found it itchy. He spent a lot of time during this period standing in the garden and looking or standing outside West Bridgford Infant school where he went himself as a child just looking and thinking. He seemed very unhappy a lot of the time as well he might but this seems to have have have have have have have captured a moment of happiness.

I cannot imagine what camera was being used the exifdata says it was a "Camera" and that the model was a "Camera". It was clearly one of mine as it was amongst those garnered from my current phones gallery.

It could have been taken in Bridgford Park but it looks to me to be the Memorial Gardens on Victoria Embankment, the site of many happy childhood memories for me and possibly the same bench me and Joseph sat on during his lunch hours from Trent Bridge School when we would endlessly compete on how much we loved each other, "To the end of the universe and back".

Technically very poor it nevertheless treasured.
