Subject:

Protest against genocide.

Notes:

I felt re-motivated by two things. The first was Scott Ritter saying that there are many of us who, when reflecting on the ethnic cleansing in pre-war Germany and the subsequent genocide, question ourselves as to what we might have done in those circumstances. There is, he remarked, no longer any need to ask ourselves this question, "your doing it now" he said.

The second inspiration was that of the Prime Minister, Rishi Sunak, who suggested yesterday that the movement to "Cease fire now!" amounted to mob rule and that the decision of the electorate to support a pro Palestine candidate at the Rochdale by-election was a threat to democracy.

I was much disappointed by the small turnout for the Nottingham protest and found that the optimistic words of the speakers rang rather hollow.
