U3A Epperstone Walk

Notes:

When I arrived the car park was already very busy but there was room if others parked a little better but it seemed folks were reluctant to move to let me in.

While I was putting on my boots everyone disappeared. I tied my laces and went out onto the road. There was a line of walkers going up the hill so I quickly followed. As I caught up with them I realised that they were all under fifty, there was no one I recognised.

I lost some time searching for the map on my phone but having found it decided to walk on my own anyway as it was such a beautiful day.

After about an hour I saw the U3A group on the ridge above Park Farm, I waved my stick but none of them seemed to recognise me so I decided to leave 'em to it.

Was surprised I never caught up with the group again but I think they must have opted to go through Epperstone Park whereas I skirted the edge. Arrived back at the Cross Keys a few minutes after them. I think I over estimate my relative walking speed these days. A few pauses to take photographs and and I've lost out irredeemably on the total journey time.
