Subject:

Walk along the embankment after heavy rain.

Notes:

Three days of heavy rain have clearly had a major impact further west. I joined a small crowd that was watching three kayakers trying to make it through the arches of Wilford Suspension Bridge. As they got the nose of their crafts into an arch it looked like they were swept sideways toward the bank and spun. The harder they paddled the more the rears of kayaks went under the water. Two were capsized and one had to abandon ship. By the time they gave up they looked very, very tired.

Nottingham Moderns Rugby pitches were completely flooded as was the area around Iremonger's Pond.

Was a little amused to note the position of the life buoys deep in the fast flowing waters. Looks like another planning failure to me. I wonder if there are any stats on when life buoys are most likely to be required.
