Subject:

Satterthwaite Study

Notes:

In 1978 I was studying for a PGCE qualification at Garnett College Roehampton. In the spring we were required to do a group project. Largely under the leadership of Philip Naylor and Gerhard Wilke we chose to study the sociology and economy of a small rural area in the Lake District.

The trip was pivotal for me. I barely knew Philip and Gerhard when they asked me to join the group but the trip cemented our friendship and led me on to join Philip at Brent Community, which in turn led to me being coordinator of Hackney Community Transport and then on by a convoluted route to computing.

These shots are probably from days 2 and 3 after arrival and setting up camp at Satterthwaite Farm i.e. 29th and 30th May. I'm guessing the visit to Lakeside, where I think possibly Philip's brother was the director, and that the visits to Lakeside & Haverthwaite Railway were on the bank holiday Monday.

I remember that Trout well. I had never come across Brown Trout before, still less had I eaten one. It was a blissful experience and I was encouraged to eat the eyeballs which I was told were considered a delicacy.

Dates:

The dates should be pretty accurate. I know the starting date of the project and all the shots are in sequence. There is an element of guesswork/judgment in picking the start and end of each day.
